Celebration without Exploitation

Toolkit for Planning Trafficking-Free Events

Background

The trafficking of persons, often for the purposes of sexual exploitation, is a global offense that is calculated to impact 27 million people... mainly economically vulnerable women and girls. UNICEF reports that there are over one million children globally entering the sex trade every year and the U.S. Department of State estimates that up to 800,000 people – mostly women and children – are trafficked across national borders annually.

Recognizing that high profile events attracting out-of-town visitors are often at higher risk for human trafficking violations, members of the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility have assembled a compendium of resources in a toolkit designed to assist in the promotion of trafficking-free local events.

The toolkit offers ideas and resources for investors to leverage a) the top down power of the private sector; b) the inside power of event organizers and participants, and; c) the bottom up power of local community groups, including law enforcement and faith organizations, against this pervasive but often clandestine practice. These tools are meant to serve as templates that can be customized for local events and to spur ideas for ongoing anti-trafficking campaigns. We welcome any new resources you might wish to add to this toolkit and any feedback you suggest for improving its effectiveness.

Audiences

The most effective campaigns will focus on a combination of all three of these important audiences with customized strategies for each:

How do we leverage the companies in our portfolios with affiliations to the event?

How do we engage the event organizers/participants to build awareness of HT risks?

How do we organize and activate community groups and local media?

I. Private Sector

Travel, tourism and hospitality industry

- Airlines
- Hotels
- Convention Sites
- Restaurants and Resorts Management

Event Sponsors: Food and Beverage, Apparel, Other

Media Companies

Strategies

Corporate Shareholder Engagement via Letters/Dialogues to corporate/local management with HT “asks”:

- Adopt ECPAT Code
- Human rights policy and reporting
- Employee Training
- Public Awareness Campaign including production/distribution of anti-HT materials and local media announcements

II. Venue Administrators, Event Promoters and Participants

Stadium Management

Ticket Promoters

Management of Sports Teams/Performers

Athletes and Performers

Conference and Sales Meeting Conveners

Strategies

- Letters outlining HT risks and resources for further education
- Public display of anti-trafficking collateral at venues
- Request that teams and performers speak out publicly about HT including appearances at local congregations and participation in PSAs

III. Local Community Groups

Law Enforcement

Faith Communities

Business owners

Local Media

Strategies

- Public Awareness campaign that focuses on human trafficking education
- Letters/calls to law enforcement with suggested resources for training
- Assemble community inter-faith taskforce to educate at the congregational level and to organize grassroots anti-trafficking campaigns
- Distribute collateral for local businesses to display
- Contact local media outlets and request free time/space in the form of PSAs to help educate the community about HT risks. Press outreach for coverage of any grassroots local campaigns.
