Dear Senator:

As investors, we encourage our portfolio companies to account for the full impact of their business on society. However, we know that the issues on which we engage with companies—such as climate change, racial justice, workers’ rights, and health equity—are systemic in nature and require strong democratic structures that serve the public interest, and voting laws that ensure full, equitable political participation by our citizenry. For this reason, we the undersigned investors support the For the People Act.

Baseless claims of voter fraud following the 2020 election led to the January 6th insurrection at the capitol where several lost their lives and dozens were seriously injured. The false narrative of a stolen election has been used to justify an alarming and ongoing wave of restrictive state-level voting laws that disproportionately impact people of color. This assault on democracy comes as the COVID-19 pandemic lays bare pervasive racial inequities in our financial, health, labor and education systems. The For the People Act intends to safeguard democratic structures by expanding voting opportunities, banning discriminatory gerrymandering and promoting transparency regarding campaign finance.\(^1\)

As investors, we are deeply concerned about the deterioration of voting rights in this country, and the political instability and erosion of democracy that will result. The For the People Act will create a level playing field for all Americans to exercise their Constitutional right to vote, and help fortify our democracy, leading to a stable economic environment in which business will thrive. It’s clear that the investor community wants a climate in which corporate political engagement is transparent, accountable, and soundly managed as evidenced by the record number of shareholder proposals calling for disclosure around political activities that passed at annual meetings this spring.

While support is building among legislators and the public for the Act, opponents like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce (U.S. Chamber) are aggressively attempting to thwart its passage. The U.S. Chamber is one of the nation’s largest lobbying groups and spenders of “dark money” on elections, and the For the People Act would threaten its ability to funnel money into the political system without accountability. Whereas, the For the People Act would help to expose dark money in our political system with the goal of limiting the influence big money has on our government.

The U.S. Chamber’s position, purporting to represent its corporate members, runs directly counter to the demands of the public. Across the country, the effort to restrict the vote is underway, with a wave of bills moving through state legislatures and becoming law. Meanwhile, companies continue to make statements in support of protecting voting rights. Expectations for corporations and their leadership around engaging in societal issues are changing. A recent poll from diversity, equity and inclusion strategy firm Paradigm and the Harris Poll found that “two-thirds of Americans want companies to speak out more publicly on issues of racial injustice.” Additionally, a majority said they would hold employers accountable if they did not, a figure that is higher among younger workers who are especially engaged in social justice issues.

As investors who call on the world’s most powerful corporations to address their impacts on people and planet, we are fundamentally at odds with the U.S. Chamber’s position. For the stability of our democracy, the protection of the public interest and the good of the business community and our economy, we urge you to pass the For the People Act.
