The Special Shareholder Meeting Proposal 4 Deserves Shareholder Votes

Since 2022 this proposal topic has won more than 47% shareholder support 3-times without any special effort by the proponent. Meanwhile EBAY has made 3 special efforts against this proposal. Thus in a fair election it appears that this proposal has already received majority votes 3-times.

This greater than 47% support likely represented much more than 50% shareholder support from the EBAY shares that have access to independent proxy voting advice which gives these shareholders insight to both sides of this important issue.

In considering the significance of repeated 47% votes too little attention has been given to the free ride that companies have in shareholder elections. Typically a company picks up free votes for opposition to shareholder proposals from the shareholders who have the least incentive or the least opportunity to be informed about shareholder proposals.

In considering the significance of repeated 47% votes too little attention has been given to the opportunity that companies use to include misleading text in opposition to shareholder proposals. There is a formal process to exclude misleading text from shareholder proposals but no formal process to exclude misleading text from opposition statements to shareholder proposals.

EBAY shareholders gave more than 47% support 3-times in spite of the misleading reasons EBAY put forth in its opposition.

An example of the misleading EBAY statements was the mention that one EBAY shareholder owns 10% of EBAY stock. To put this 10% ownership in proper context shareholders of more than 100 companies have voted on the special shareholder meeting topic and there has not been even one example of a 10% holder ever calling for a special shareholder meeting at a company worth at least $5 billion. EBAY is worth $40 Billion.

EBAY submitted a May 14, 2026 EDGAR filing that could mean that EBAY is paying Innisfree a proxy solicitation fee of $25,000, plus additional fees in an attempt to depress the support for this Proposal 4. Why else would EBAY need to pay $25,000 when there is nothing extraordinary about the 2026 EBAY annual meeting ballot?

The ultimate responsibility for this extraordinary EBAY resistance to strong shareholder votes and fair EBAY elections falls on Mr. Paul Pressler, chair of the EBAY Governance Committee. Mr. Pressler thus deserves against votes.

Please vote for an attainable shareholder right to call for a special shareholder meeting, Proposal 4
